CHAPTER XIV

Chet Morton, Detective

DESPERATELY, Frank's eyes searched for the island.
A wave lifted him, and he stared through the mist, ness seeking vainly for the shore. Suddenly he was conscious of the tinkling of a bell.

The buoy!

He turned his head and saw the light a few feet
from him, bobbing and blinking in the foam
with the waves.

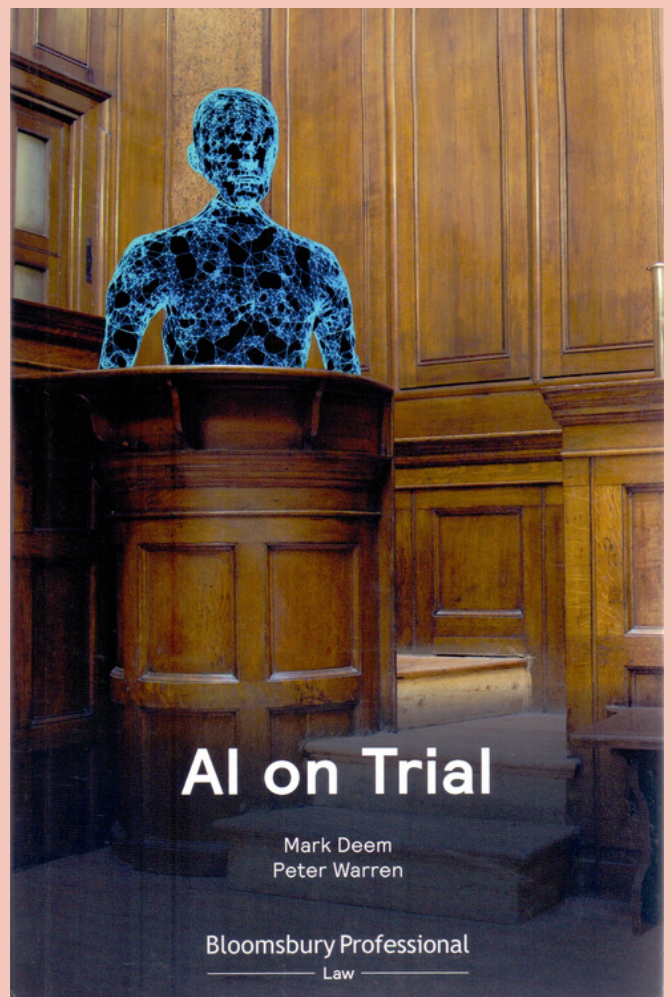

With a thankful heart, he swam toward it, clung to the chain. He knew now that the island was only a hundred yards away. But he almost
